The latest bathroom trends from Reece

Zoning, integration, wet rooms - all current bathroom trends that you may soon read about as you start to plan your dream bathroom. And to ensure bathroom lovers are across all the latest trends, here is an update from Reece, Australia's leading name in bathrooms.

Having recently returned from the ISH bathroom fair in Germany, Belinda Geels, Reece Bathroom Marketing Manager, investigates the latest bathroom trends.

Material mix up

We are currently seeing a diverse range of materials being used, including wood, stone, resin and stainless steel. Timber in showers, resin in baths and Corian in vanities is being used to inject warmth, whilst also allowing for a range of uniquely shaped products.

Real Shapes

Following on from the material mix up, soft bathrooms without hard edges and corners are going to be in vogue. Natural, organic shaped products, conveying a more free, fun design spirit in the bathroom will be prominent.

Integration

Hidden storage, invisible shower bases, concealed toilet cisterns, combined bath and basin sets, it is currently all about integration.

Zoning

Distinct zones are appearing in the bathroom and it is all about creating multi-functional areas for specific uses – there are now areas for rejuvenation, styling, hygiene and rest, all reflecting the continuing trend of people spending more time in the bathroom. One popular ‘zone’ is the wet room, an open plan style shower area, without a conventional showerscreen or base.

High Tech

Technology in the bathroom will soon be even bigger – whether it be an ipod integrated into your bathroom mirror, a clever thermostatic mixer or indulgent mood lighting, technology will allow your bathroom to be whatever you want it to be.

The Milli bath outlets are soft, curved and organic.

The Sonia Atic Vanity is perfect for those wanting to create a home hotel style bathroom.

The Nikles Quatre 250 Showerhead is luxurious and water efficient.

Sustainability

This enduring theme was prominently showcased at ISH, campaigned under the banner of 'Blue Responsibility'. Innovative technology is being used to ensure our bathroom products are delivering a luxurious bathing experience, while using less water. Nikles, Hansgrohe and Methven are already leading the way when it comes to innovative showerheads.

Home Hotel

Luxury hotel inspired bathrooms is a continuing trend. More than ever before, the bathroom is a reflection of personal taste – furniture, such as inviting couches, ornate cupboards and even dressing tables are appearing in the bathroom, which were once only seen in the finest hotels. Relaxing private spa inspired bathrooms - complete with soaking tubs and luxurious showerheads - is now a must in the modern home.
